CONTRA.

Paid for stock, grain, groceries, etc.,	$584 60
Wages of Superintendent,	300 00
Taxes, 1866, (abated),	41 76
Interest on farm and stock,	201 37
Services of Overseer of the Poor,	23 00
Decrease of appraisal,	7 06
Excess of Timber sold,	16 95
Expense of appraisal,	4 00
Excess of money drawn from the Treasury,	44 75
	$1,223 49

It may be proper to state that there is a larger amount of hay, grain and provisions than there was at the appraisal last year ; but the falling of prices has caused a diminution in the total value of the present year. There is at the present time but five paupers at the farm. Three of them are supported by the county and two by the town. One county pauper and one town pauper are supported by contract. The county has purchased a farm in the town of Westmoreland, upon which all paupers adjudged to be supported by the county are to be placed, as soon as the necessary buildings can be erected and furnished which will probably be in the course of the ensuing summer. This change will consequently reduce the number of inmates of our alms-house. The question arises whether it will be for the interest of the town to carry on the farm for the support of town paupers only. The cost of management, and the interest on the value of the property would be nearly the same as at present. My impression is that it would be expedient and for the interest of the town, when the county paupers are removed, to sell the farm and support our paupers by contract. I have requested the Selectmen to insert an article in the warrant for the next meeting, in order that the matter may be brought before the town for such action as may be deemed expedient. The farm was purchased in the year 1837, and paid for from the town's portion of the surplus revenue divided among the States by act of Congress, and coming from this source, it may be suggested, that the proceeds of the sale of the property be kept as a fund (the same in principle as at present used) and the interest accruing be applied to defray the expense of pauperism, or it can be applied to reduce the town debt. The condition of the farm is as good as can be expected. The buildings are ample and in good repair. The location of the farm and the enhanced value of wood and timber is such that by a judicious sale the town would realize a large portion of the cost and outlay.

Dublin, Feb. 18, 1867.

This certifies that I have examined the foregoing Report of the Overseer of the Poor, and find it properly vouched and correctly cast.

REPORT

SUPERINTENDING SCHOOL COMMITTEE.

THE past teaches no truth more clearly, or more emphatically than that virtue and intelligence among the people are indispensable to the preservation of free institutions. In this progressive age—in this fast country, this truth should be written in letters of living light, to be seen and read of all men, and impressed indelibly upon all hearts as the great conservative principle that underlies the liberty and equality of the people. The Pulpit and the Press, and the School are the chief public agencies for diffusing knowledge and for promoting virtue in the community. If the pulpit is faithful and true to its high mission,—if the emanations of the press are leavened with a true regard for the best good of society,—and if the school is cherished as the “apple of the eye” by the whole people, we may be assured that this “three fold cord” will draw after it the permanent well-being of all. And in proportion as any one, or all of these shall fail in duty to the public weal, may we look for a corresponding decline in the virtue and intelligence of the people of the Republic.

As occupying a small but important position in one of these great departments, we invite attention to the Common Schools of Dublin as exhibited the past year. We bespeak for them a more earnest and active interest, a more enlightened zeal than is usually manifested in their behalf by the people of the several districts.

There can be no doubt that a wise and discreet oversight of the schools by the people would result in their improvement. Let their interest be shown by more frequent visits, that they may see for themselves the difficulties and embarrassments of the teacher's position—that they may hear for themselves “the other side” of any unfavorable reports that may have reached them, and thus be better able to judge for themselves of what transpires in the school-room. A friendly sympathy and ready co-operation with the best teachers will add much to the efficiency of their labors and render their schools more profitable to those under their care, while to the inexperienced, or to those who are more or less deficient in qualifications for the place they occupy, they are indispensable to a tolerable degree of success.

And when we consider the variety of qualifications necessary to a teacher's success, we shall cease to wonder that comparatively so few attain to eminence in the profession, and we shall see the propriety, yea the necessity of giving them all the aid in our power if we would obtain services at all proportioned in value to the wages we pay them. For, not only must the successful teacher have the necessary literary qualifications, but must be “apt to teach,” love the employment, be fond of children, and last though not least, be able to apply “Heaven's first law” to the chaos of minds, and hearts, and actions that surround him. In view of this, a large proportion of our teachers may well exclaim, “Who is sufficient for these things!” and shrink from the task before them if no friendly hand is reached forth to greet them, and no voice of sympathy salutes them. We would not be understood that visiting schools is the only way in which our interest in them can be manifested—far from it. Those that are unable to visit them, if they feel this interest, will find some other channel in which their sympathies will flow, and overflow to bless the teachers, and promote the welfare of the schools.

We have been led to these remarks by the fact that there is a falling off of nearly one-half in the number of visits to the Winter schools this year as compared with last, and we fear that the want of interest in the several districts bears some proportion to their share of this diminution.

The following gentlemen served as Prudential Committee in their respective districts the past year :

District No. 1. JOSEPH PERRY, GEO. W. GLEASON, WALTER GREENWOOD.

“ 2. CHARLES W. GOWING.

“ 3. DANIEL G. JONES.

“ 4. HERVEY LEARNED.

“ 5. JAMES ALLISON.

“ 6. ELMER B. HOWE, THADDEUS MORSE.

“ 7. WILLIAM KNIGHT, AARON SMITH.

“ 8. E. M. WEST.

“ 9. DAVID M. TOWNSEND.

“ 10. G. BRUCE GILCHRIST.

As a whole the Summer Schools had a fair degree of success. In districts No. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 7, 9, and 10 they were above mediocrity—some of them very much above it. In districts No. 7 and 8, there were three terms ; the two first of which were reckoned as Summer Schools. The teacher of the second term in No. 7, was obliged by sickness in her family, to close a very satisfactory term prematurely without an examination.

In No. 8 the same teacher taught both the Summer terms, and though quite as successful as in the same school last year, we cannot regard it as entitled to rank in the first class of Summer Schools. The qualifications of the teacher were more superficial than solid—a thorough drill in some of the branches taught would carry her beyond her depth.

The teacher in No. 6, labored hard for the amount of work accomplished. She seemed to have less talent than inclination for carrying forward the business of the school-room. And her efforts were apparently divided between intellectual and religious instruction.

We would renewedly commend the Summer Schools to the watchful care of the people of the Town. The Registers show a diminution of the number of visits to them of more than a hundred, as compared with last year. Sleepless vigilance, untiring effort are the price of advancement in any of our schools, and this truth is emphasized when applied to "those little ones" that attend the Summer Schools. Their susceptible minds instinctively catch every gleam of interest, every shade of indifference towards the school, and the effort, for good or for evil, is more palpable than on minds more fully matured.

The Winter Schools exhibited a much greater variety of character than last year.

Districts No. 1 and 2 had the same teachers both Summer and Winter, as last year, and nearly or quite the same high degree of improvement marked their efforts this year as last.

The long experience of the teacher in No. 3 has not abated her ardor in the cause of education, nor slackened her efforts for its advancement. Her faithfulness and skill were clearly exemplified in the appearance of the school at the closing examination.

The school in No. 4, though one of the smallest in town, was a profitable one, proving to the satisfaction of the Committee that the right teacher had found the right place.

No. 5 was fortunate in securing the services of the same teacher for both terms. These were her first terms in her native town. The good order, and prompt, as well as thorough instruction that prevailed in school, authorize the prediction, and encourage the hope that they will not be her last terms here.

In No. 6 the school was a failure, and worse than a failure. After continuing about five weeks it closed abruptly without examination. The difficulty seemed to be that three or four of the large boys, actuated by a high regard for the privileges and immunities of "Young America," were disposed to indulge in conduct not in accordance with good order in school; and the teacher had so exalted an opinion of our educational system as to let the school keep itself. The result was what might have been anticipated. Things went on from bad to worse and ended as above stated. This is to be the more regretted as a majority of the school, under a faithful and competent teacher, were disposed to make a good use of their time and advantages, and would probably have enabled us to give a very different account of it. It is but just to say that this was the teacher's first attempt to stand at the helm; and his youth and inexperience may in part, at least, account for his failure to bring his craft to the desired haven.

The teachers in Nos. 6 and 7 were the only male teachers in town this Winter, and they were alike inexperienced in the management of a common school. The latter had abundant literary qualifications, and those scholars that were disposed to learn made very commendable progress. But his power of enforcing discipline, and maintaining order in school was somewhat limited. Apparently with a mild disposition himself, he was ill fitted to come in contact with those rougher specimens of humanity we sometimes meet with, even in the school-room. Beginning the term with too high an estimate of the disposition of some of his scholars, when he found it necessary to tighten the reins they grew restive under it and left the school. There is no remedy for this state of things outside of the district. The best of teachers can have but partial success if his efforts are met with indifference or opposition on the part of the parents, and scholars. Without pretending to adjust the exact proportion of blame between the teacher, the parents, and scholars, we feel that our connection with the schools, and the circumstances of the case, will justify, if not demand an exhortation to increased interest towards the school—an interest that will not wait till everything is brought to the standard of the individual—but if difficulties throno the way will work the harder to remove them, and if the teacher has his imperfections, strive to make up for them by increased activity and diligence. These remarks of course do not apply to such teachers as are so incompetent or unfaithful that they should be at once dismissed.

The veteran teacher in No. 8 fully sustained her former reputation. With a large school of small scholars, the discipline was good, and the progress as rapid as consists with thorough instruction.

Had the teacher in No. 9 been more energetic in her manner of instruction the school would have appeared better, but the people of the district took the matter in hand, co-operated with her, and the result was very fair progress in the several branches taught.

The school in No. 10 was one of the smallest in town. On account of the impassable state of the roads it closed without an examination. Of its merits or demerits we cannot therefore speak from personal observation.

In districts No. 1, 3, and 9, the schools were somewhat disturbed, and the teachers annoyed by a few of the large boys in each. Too old to submit quietly to the wholesome regulations of the school, especially when administered by a female, and too young to have a proper sense of shame in the matter, we can only express a hope that before another year they will be convinced that it is the part of wisdom to comply with the wishes of their parents, and work with instead of against the teacher.

The condition of some of the out-buildings in No. 1 would indicate on the part of some of the scholars a long retrograde stride towards barbarism.

The boys in No. 7 are entitled to the first premium for the worst specimens of carving as exhibited on the seats and benches of the school-house.

The percentage of attendance is considerably reduced from that of the two preceding Winters, owing probably to the bad state of the roads. The number of tardy marks has considerably increased, perhaps from the same cause. There is some diversity of practice among teachers in marking those who are late. The best rule would seem to be to call the roll on coming to order and mark such as are not present to answer to their names. For want of some uniform rule the Committee sometimes fail of doing equal justice to the several districts. For statistics see tables at the close of the Report.

A profitable term of the Dublin High School was held last Autumn under the instruction of HOSEA M. KNOWLTON, an under-graduate of Tuft's College.

We greatly fear that the habit of using profane and obscene language is increasing in our schools. This corrupt and corrupting practice, whether it is derived from bad example at home, or from evil associates at school should not be tolerated. Example and precept and influence should each and all be put forth with a strong and united hand to arrest and avert the evil. For, in the words of last year's Report, "educating the intellect alone is far from coming up to our idea of what a complete education should be. Unless moral culture and mental training go hand in hand, we may expect to see the whole character warped from its symmetrical proportions in the same ratio as the moral element is wanting. Although home is the fountain whence this element is or should be drawn, teachers should see to it that the pure stream be not sullied in its passage through the school. Let the language and associations of the school-room react upon the virtuous home. Let both be faithful co-adjutors in the holy work of keeping the plastic natures of these little ones "unspotted from the world." Let the profane oath, the ribald jest, the obscene insinuation pollute the pure atmosphere of neither.

Commending the schools to the oversight of a wise and enlightened public opinion in the several districts, and invoking the blessing of Heaven on all efforts for their improvement, we respectfully submit the foregoing Report of their Schools to the people of the Town.
